DRAWBACK ON ALASKA.—The House Committee on Foreign Affairs is engaged in investigating a matter which bids fair to have an important bearing upon the action of the House in regard to the appropriation to pay for Alaska.

Private parties holding a claim against the Russian Government for ordnance stores furnished during the Crimean war, the contract price for which was $500,000, have filed this claim, with the committee named above, and ask that this sum be withheld by our Government from moneys appropriated to settle with Russia for Alaska.

It appears that sometime before the Crimean war closed the Russian Government sent officers to this country to purchase arms and ammunition. Proposals were solicited from several firms and, finally, upon propositions in writing from W. B. Perkins, of Massachusetts, Baron Stoeckl, the Russian Minister in Washington, agreed to take from Mr. Perkins one hundred and fifty tons of American cannon powder.

Contract was also made for 35,000 rifles with Mr. Perkins, through the advice of Baron Stoeckl, but through an ordinance officer of the Russian Government sent out for the purpose, the powder was inspected and loaded on ship-board according to the stipulations, and the rifles were manufactured and held subject to order from Russia. At this time the war closed, and the Russian authorities refused to receive either the powder or the arms.

The matter was brought to the attention of the State Department at an early day, and Mr. Seward submitted the matter to the authorities at St. Petersburg, urging the recognition of the claim, and asking that it might be recognized and settled.

The Russian Government, however, refused to take any action on the matter, or even to acknowledge the debt, shielding itself with the excuse that the contracts for these military stores on their part were not made in writing. The question is puzzling the committee greatly, and Mr. Seward is severely censured for not insisting upon a clause in the late treaty providing for the settlement of all just claims any of our citizens might have against Russia, as he was well aware of their character.

CLERGYMAN TALK.—We have heard of a clergyman who, on his way to church with some young people, boasted that he could preach a sermon extempore, on a moment's notice, if any one would give him the text. One of the company immediately proposed that he should do it that afternoon. He consented, and the text selected was, "Ephraim is a cake not turned." He broke down entirely before he was half through. The sermon is still remembered in the parish as the half-baked sermon.

There is an old lady residing in the country parts of one of our Eastern dioceses, who is a mother in Israel, and who, whenever the bishop or any of the dignitaries of the church visits her parish, always has a dinner party, and invites thereto the magnates of the village. On such occasions the affairs of the church in the neighborhood are freely discussed. On one of the times the fact was mentioned that a former rector had returned to his old parish in the neighborhood. So a clergyman present expressed the opinion that the good brother, though an excellent preacher in some respects, failed in one particular, at least, that he did not preach Christ with sufficient prominence. This started up the old lady, who considered the person criticized her special protegee, and was herself quite a character. She called out from her place at the head of the table, "Sir, you are mistaken. Mr. P. preaches Christ as much as you do, only he does not make a great fuss about it."

There was a great wedding in a neighboring city, in a family which was exceedingly numerous. The bride party, with the clergyman, were gathered in a small boudoir that opened into the main parlor by folding doors. In this main parlor were gathered a great crowd of the relatives, all belonging to this proverbially numerous family. The sliding of the doors was a signal for the beginning of the services. Immediately upon their unfolding and revealing to the bride party the numerous company gathered to witness the ceremony, the minister began his prayer thus: "Lord what a multitude—before he could add 'of mercies,' the invited guests had caught an idea very different from that intended, and were so amused as to lose half the solemnity of the occasion."

A BUREAU MAN TARRIED AND VARNISHED. We were informed yesterday of a scene that occurred a few days since at Vienna, a village in the southeastern portion of this country. A sub agent for the bureau, named Pointer, from Marshall county, desiring to replenish the coffers of the bureau, or his own, appeared in Vienna, and attempted to collect the sum of a dollar and a half from each negro for drawing up contracts. The negroes could not see it in this light, and refused to pay the subsidy; whereupon Pointer, having tampered freely of corn juice, abused the negroes at a round rate, cursing and threatening them. After bearing this until patience ceased to be a virtue, a crowd of the lustiest negroes, and besmeared his face with tar, and afterwards applied a coat of varnish, and with this dress turned him loose. His disastrous flight he entered the stage of a merchant, where there were some ladies of a boisterous and indecent language. He laid himself down before the fire, muttering and cursing the while, when the merchant attempted to put him out of the house. At this point Pointer showed fight, and was struck a severe blow on the head with a hatchet, which sobered him, and gave him a disgust for the Vienna country. He left precipitately.

Huntsville (Alabama) Independent.—
CHARLES DICKENS—a high authority—leans to the position that first impressions are usually correct, and also says: "I have known a vast quantity of nonsense talked about bad men not looking you in the face. Don't trust that conventional idea. Dishonesty will stare honesty out of countenance any day in the week if there is anything to be got by it."
